(c) whether Government is contemplating any scheme of Public Distribution System which would serve their poverty justifiably; and

(d) if so, the details of the scheme thereof?

THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE MINISTRY OF CONSUMER AFFAIRS, FOOD AND PUBLIC DISTRIBUTION (DR. AKHILESH PRASAD SINGH): (a) to (d) For allocation of foodgrains under TPDS, the accepted number of BPL families (including AAY), based on 1993-94 poverty estimates of Planning Commission and March 2000 population estimate of Registrar General of India, is 6.52 crores. However, the State & UT Governments have issued 10.28 crore BPL & AAY ration cards. Thus the BPL & AAY cards are more by 3.76 crores. The Government got Targeted Public Distribution System (TPDS) evaluated by Programme Evaluation Organisation of Planning Commission and ORG MARG. Their reports received in 2005 pointed out high levels of exclusion and inclusion errors in identification of eligible BPL families and diversion of foodgrains.

In cases of exclusion errors, eligible BPL and Antyodaya families were not categorized as such. In cases of inclusion errors, ineligible families were found to have been categorized as BPL and Antyodaya households.

To strengthen TPDS by eliminating exclusion and inclusion errors in identification of eligible BPL and AAY families and by eliminating leakages and diversions of foodgrains, a nine-point Action Plan was evolved. This is under implementation by State and UT Governments. As part of this Action Plan and as stipulated under the PDS (Control) Order, 2001, the State Governments have been directed to continuously review BPL and AAY lists so as to eliminate the APL families wrongly categorized as BPL and Antyodaya families and to include the genuine BPL and AAY families which might have been excluded while preparing the lists. This is a continuous process and is expected to result in inclusion of genuine poor in the lists of BPL and Antyodaya families which might have been wrongly categorized as APL. This will result in proper targeting of the poor families so that they get the benefits meant for BPL and AAY categories.
